Santa Clara University

The age-old Santa Clara University tradition continues into its 153rd year as a Catholic institution based in the heart of Silicon Valley. Since it was founded by Jesuits in 1851, Santa Clara has become a distinguished institution of higher learning. Its rigorous curriculum and Schools of the Arts & Sciences, Business, and Engineering attract undergraduate students from all around the globe.

Every student at SCU has a different story—different backgrounds, hometowns, and experiences. These unique personalities bring an immense amount of diversity to campus. By sharing these traits we are exposed to new ideas, and fellow Broncos share their interests in clubs and activities. Different events all over the world shape student opinions. Whether the focus is a political issue, or in this year's case a presidential candidate, the interaction of Santa Clara students and diversity they bring from all different parts of the world come together to form one unified Santa Clara University community.

Is the closet the gays were once in vanishing? What does "queer culture" and "gay pride" mean to you?

Art submitted by Jennifer Jigour

Same-sex couples are repugnant -- morally and socially -- to many people. Others view them simply as fellow human beings that are entitled to the same respect and benefits that are bestowed upon their heterosexual neighbors. And with the Gay Marriage Amendment that was killed in the Senate this year, the nation has been crying out for equal rights across the board for homosexuals; the opposition is asking for a continuation of the repression of their rights.

If the GMA had survived the Senate vote, it would have been only the second time in our country's history that an amendment to restrict Americans' civil liberties had been written into law. Prohibition was the first, and as we all know, it didn't last long.

When Santa Clara graduate and Mayor of San Francisco Gavin Newsom announced that same-sex couples could wed earlier this year, thousands of same-sex couples rushed to obtain their licenses. Other states followed suit as well.

Newsom has openly stated that gay marriage "is about bringing people together." People who oppose Newsom's decree claim that it is "municipal anarchy" and that same-sex marriages should be halted at once.

Unfortunately for some, the California licenses are now void.

As a result of the ideological battle between conservatives and liberals in the country, 11 states have placed initiatives on their ballots this election year to ban gay marriage, thus defining marriage in their state strictly between a man and a woman. All 11 states passed the initiatives.

San Francisco is an internatnional melting pot for gays. SCU students take part in rallies for gay rights in America's gay capital yearly.

San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom is an avant-garde of the gay marriage movement. Newsom is also an SCU grad.

Santa Clara students attend a gay rights parade in the Castro district in San Francisco on Halloween.

What's the Big Deal?

In our evolving society that is growing more tolerant toward issues such as medical marijuana use, why the public outcry against gay marriage and gay rights?

Oregon's Republican Senator Gordon Smith, who voted for the federal Gay Marriage Ban, said that he has "always believed it right to defend gay rights, but also to defend traditional marriage (and) traditional marriage is between a man and a woman." Smith also stated that "you cannot check your beliefs at the doors of the Senate," referring to his religious Mormon views. Herein lies the the true fight that gays will be fighting against for some time: Religion.

Religious undertones facilitate each and every argument against homosexual rights. If one sets their religion aside and looks at gay rights simply at face value -- the rights of another human being -- what is keeping them from allowing gays the same rights alloted to their heterosexual friends, gays ask. Some may reply that it is the erosion of traditional family values, and that children are best raised by a father and a mother, not a mother and a mother, father and a father. Gays counter that the children they are raising had no parents prior to their adoption and that two queer parents are better than none at all.

The Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Alliance, or GALA, is a group on campus that pushes for gay rights and awareness. GASPED, also known as Gays and Straights Promoting Educational Diversity, team up with GALA to host activities such as movie nights, drag shows, and AIDS walks. A member of GALA stated that "homosexuality is invisible" and "unless you are extremely flamboyant, people don't know you are gay until you tell them."

Linda Garber, an Associate Professor of English and the Director of the Program for the Study of Women and Gender, stated that "religious principles should not influence secular rights." According to Garber, the anti-gay marriage initiatives as well as the Gay Marriage Amendment are beyond politics. "(The GMA) is a clear case of discrimination," she said. "It is crass, partisan politics. The amendment would codify discrimination into the Constitution."

Gays are the only group of people in America that can still be openly criticized. They are also the only citizens that the government can be politically intolerant toward. According to a gay couple that received their marriage license, "The African Americans had their struggle for civil rights. Now it's our turn."

Gays want many questions answered by the heterosexual majority who oppose their lifestyle. But perhaps the one that stands out above all others is: Why is the love of two people of the same sex who are not imposing their sexuality upon you any different from the love that two people of the opposite sex have for one another?

Would you know these six people were gay if they weren't holding a flag?

What

As America invaded Iraq for the second time, Santa Clara students found themselves becoming more aware of our political environment. A recent national survey showed that today's college student has little appetite for politics, but as we saw this November in the midst of the highly anticipated presidential election centered around the Iraq war, our bellies began to rumble and our views became known. Far before the election approached, the SCU campus saw bouts of strong anti-war activism. Eleven SCU students were arrested in March 2003 when they protested the war in Iraq in San Francisco along with other activists. The campus saw many backpacks and jackets adorned with messages such as, "No War," "Stop the Killing," and "Support Our Troops."

As a state, 52% of California citizens support the Iraq war, but within Santa Clara County only 39% support the war. This statistic generally represents how the SCU community views the war too. Most students are opposed to the Iraq war and find it hard to come up with legitimate reasons for America's conquest of Iraq.

Santa Clara is speaking out

Kristen Elserougi, a SCU student and member of the Arab Cultural Society states, "The reasons were not justified for America Invading Iraq." But she does go on to support the recent efforts by America to establish a democracy for the Iraqi people claiming that "it will tie Iraq in with the rest of the Western World and will eventually help the people live better lives." Other students and faculty blame the war for increasing the already huge federal deficit and bruising the US economy. According to Professor of Economics Fred Foldvary, "We are not only spending money to fund the war, we are also taking money out of the economy by taking men and women to Iraq that would otherwise hold other non-military jobs here."

As Election Day neared, the campus bustled with debates, and almost everyone had a strong opinion about the war and the candidates viewpoints on it. More than ever, students at Santa Clara were beginning to think outside of the bubble they lived in and made sure their opinions were heard. Professors took part, and many students couldn't help but notice a faculty member's white Volvo outside of St. Joseph's Hall decorated with politically charged messages written in shoe polish.

As a result of the election, many students are left wondering: "Where will we go from here?" If this war has accomplished nothing else, it has made each one of us become more involved in the political process of this country.

Service at Santa Clara

Students at Santa Clara are grateful for the education they receive and they recognize this institution's goal to educate men and women to be leaders with compassion. Students are privileged to attend Santa Clara University, and many participate in giving back to the local and international community. Santa Clara offers many opportunites on campus for students to get involved, share their gifts with those who may be less fortunate, and lend their helping hands.

The Santa Clara Community Action Program (SCCAP) is a student organization, lead by Director Heidi Kallen that offers opportunities to serve their communities. The organization's 23 programs include "Homelessness Action", which provides and works with homeless citizens; "Companionship" works with the elderly and young people; "The Next Generation" with young students; "Earth" is for environmental causes; "Fire" educates people about controversial world issues.

"It's time for greatness - not for greed. It's time for idealism - not ideology. It is a time not just for compassionate words, but also for compassionate action."

The Pedro Arrupe Center is an organization for community-based learning. The center works with students and actively engages them to see our world realistically. Students work with people in other parts of the world, and with compassionate action respond to the needs of those who are less fortunate.

There are additional options fo serving fellow students on campus. Many choose to participate in Campus Ministry by encouraging personal growth and creating an environment where faith may be explored.

Certainly, Santa Clara provides outlets for students to make a difference in today's modern world. The wide variety of organizations and groups on campus provide a place for students to get to know others all while contributing for the better good of their community.

"I feel drawn to volunteer, to serve others. There is something about giving my life to others that opens my eyes to the greater mystery of life. In this work I am confronted with poverty, injustice, hunger, homelessness and violence. Service then allows me to embrace that which is ugly, outcast, and unwanted in our society and moves me to a place of active nonviolence and love."

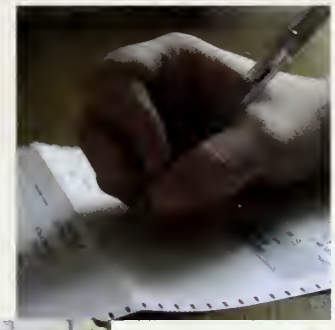
THE ISSUES

Bush's Victory & Kerry's Defeat

2004 Election Outlook

George Bush, seeking reelection in a time of war, was undeniably granted a second term by American voters on November 2nd. We should consider ourselves lucky that for the 2004 election the same candidate won both the popular and electoral college vote. The final tally resulted with 274 electoral votes for Bush and 252 for Senator John Kerry. Bush received 58.4 million popular votes while Kerry had 54.8 million. These results left some people shouting with merriment, "Four more years," while others simply sighed, "oh god four more years." Some of those who sighed at the incumbent's reelection possibly saw a stubborn leader with a knack for simply being unable to admit error. Others joyfully held up four fingers feeling that Kerry's flip-flop, can't take a stand on that issue attitude was not trustable. Although Bush's opinion on many issues seem to be in the less than popular sector here in liberal California; he won a battle that no war-time president seeking reelection has ever lost. It seems that for this term it all boiled down to moral issues.



"Until Students vote legislators aren't going

Morals and values took center stage in the 2004 presidential election. As controversial issues hit the ballots this year, voting trends veered toward the morality of these topics. Issues like the economy, terrorism and Iraq, although still imperative, were placed on back burner. Two of the most controversial issues on the ballot-abortion and same sex marriage-played a large role in the decision making of many voters.

On the issue of abortion, the Republican and Democratic presidential candidates stood on two very different ends. Bush, feeling that partial birth abortion is a brutal practice, basically said that we as a society must make a place for the unborn child. Kerry on the other hand took the more Constitutional route for this particular issue. Kerry felt that his own personal faith should not interfere with the decisions people choose to make. Bush chose to protect unborn life with this issue; Kerry chose to protect the Constitutional rights of individuals. Faith-based voters were more inclined to lean in Bush's direction. One of the more controversial issues facing America today, same sex-marriages has caused a clash of opinion between all parties.

Freshmen elections brought the largest voter turnout that AS has ever seen at Santa Clara. A total of 458 frosh cast their votes for general class election. For run off elections for the seats of President and Vice President a total of 227 frosh voted. The freshmen sure know the power of their voice, and hopefully they used that power in the November 2nd election.

pay attention to them. It gives us a voice!"

-Senior Marie Dominguez-Gasson

Both candidates fought a tough battle against each other in the "culture war" at home over the diverse matter of marriage. ısh, implementing his personal ethics, was not supportive of same sex marriage. Kerry, while agreeing with Bush's stand, had ore of a liberal proposal for the topic. Meanwhile our country dealt with the issue by placing it on 11 state ballots. Each of the 11 ates vowed to amend their individual constitutions to ban gay marriages. Kerry, adhering to the Constitution, fought this war on the ounds that same-sex partnership rights should be considered fundamental human rights. Bush, however, used the weapon of mass nservativeness to uphold the ideology that marriage should be restricted to a man and a woman. Senior Justin Hammar's opinion marriage is that, "marriage and civil unions are matters that the government should not be regulating in any way. This is really natter of the government trying to intervene in a personal institution, which I believe should never happen." In regards to the 11 ates voting to change their constitutions to prohibit same-sex marriages a vast majority of individuals from these states sided with ısh's ideology for marriage. Same sex marriage, seen as a radical way of life for some, did not get America's seal of approval. hen looking at the individual candidates positions with war and terror we once again face a diverse trend of opinion.

In the "war on terror" department, Bush has chosen to fight a battle that involves offensive tactics and homeland security. ısh reminds voters that the world is now a less dangerous environment with Saddam Hussein sitting in a prison cell. Bush has pled federal funding for homeland security since 2001. Kerry, however, tackled the terror war with a defensive approach. Feeling t the U.S. does not have enough intelligence to counter terrorism, Kerry urged voters that it is vital to bring 40,000 new troops into q. Kerry also feels that it is necessary to strengthen borders and ports in defense of any further attacks. Freshmen Fatima Franco els, "War is never a good thing because lives are lost. But I do support the president and his decision to go to war, and I think the iddle East is much better for it. I think we hear far too many negative messages about the war, which discourages troops. There e in actuality many good things happening over there which are not being exposed. There is life emerging in Iraq, not just death." hile many people feel that the causalities in Iraq are growing far too quickly for an uncertain cause, a majority still feel that the S. should keep forces in Iraq until the country is stabilized.

Looking across the nation one can see that Kerry won a vast majority of big liberal states, while Bush took tons of tiny nservative sates in the 2004 presidential election. According to the November 15th edition of Newsweek, an article entitled, "How Did It," stated that Bush won by just 5% in Nevada, Ohio, and Florida. The same article statistically showed that Kerry only won 5% in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts. As far as voter turnout, Newsweek stated that this was heaviest voter turnout since 1968. While the importance of voting is clear to most, Senior Marie Dominguez-Gasson sums it up two simple sentences, "Until students vote legislators aren't going to pay attention to them. It gives us a voice!"

Are collegiate football games and all their glory the main source of fan support and energized spirit on college campuses? Well, obviously not if the college ceases to have a football program to speak of.For years Santa Clara has been proving that spirit can also be found on the soccer field, the basketball and volleyball courts, and within each and every athletic team on campus. However, fans are almost as important to any sport as the athletes themselves, so finding new ways to attract fans to the events is always on the tables. This year, under the direction of the new athletic director, Dan Coonan, the university has been making an even more concentrated effort to increase the school spirit level for all sporting events. At the beginning of the year, Coonan talked with all of the athletes about his goal of raising the number of students attending the athletic events throughout the year. He asked the athletes to put forth the effort to inform and excite the student body about their upcoming matches. The first portion of Fall quarter, the first ever Bronco Bash was launched in the Leavey Center. The Bronco Bash was designed to bring the fans and the athletes together for a night of games, music, and various performances by the athletes themselves. The event prompted the student body to show their Bronco pride while also being given the opportunity to win some awesome prizes. Overall, the event was a success and is possibly something we can expect to see in the years to come.

Another change made by Coonan was moving the student section in the Leavey Center from the far right-hand side to the center of the bleachers. This change brought student "Roughriders" to the center of the action in the gymnasium and also allowed for more room in the stands for the fans to fill. The energy and excitement that are provided by a spirited student crowd has worked as fuel for the athletes on many occasions. Between the efforts of Dan Coonan and of the athletes themselves, fan support has definitely increased this academic year. The spirited student body has demanded public recognition of Santa Clara, and it is inevitable that our Bronco pride will continue to grow stronger with each new year.

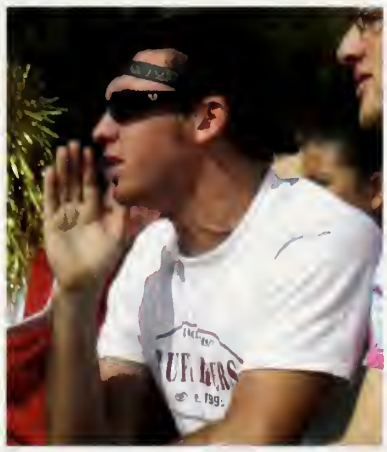
Shut 'Em Down, Open Up Shop.

Just this year, president Paul Locatelli appointed Dan Coonan to the position director of athletics and recreation. Coonan, former executive associate athletic director at California, Berkeley, was by far the most eligible candidate for the position. Coonan has signed a six year contract with Santa Clara University, and is sure to bring success and enthusiasm to the athletic program at SCU. Father Locatelli described Coonan as "a person of integrity who will use his vision and talent to take our athletic program to an even higher level of quality. He will bring a strong, positive, and competitive presence for our sports at the local, regional and national levels." Coonan is the fifth director of athletics at Santa Clara, and his responsibilities will entail overseeing all aspects of operating the departments seventeen NCAA Division I intercollegiate sports as well as all recreation, intramural and club sports programs. All preexisting staff in the athletic department here at Santa Clara were excited about the addition of Coonan as their director and new member of their team.

Junior, Ross Nelson is currently serving as co-president of the official student booster club of Santa Clara University Athletics, less formally known as The Ruff Riders. The Ruff Riders are the largest student organization on campus with over 1600 members. The goals of this group of students is to increase school spirit on campus and at all athletic events. However, the group also provides an excellent social opportunity to meet tons of new people through a common interest: athletics. Nelson does his part to support our school and show his Bronco pride by trying to be at as many student athletic events as possible. Nelson also works hard at getting his peers excited about the matches and aims to bring as many fans to the events as he can gather. His love for athletics and most importantly his high level of school spirit is inspiring to many students. Together, the Ruff Riders have created a fun, exciting and positive atmosphere for all Bronco fans that helps solidify home court/field advantages.



Diversity. It's an issue that is ever-present at Santa Clara University. Whether it's a celebration of diversity that we have on campus or efforts to change the lack there of, it's an issue that students and faculty alike face everyday.

celebrating diversity

Celebrating Diversity. Students fill the Bronco late one night for a concert. Orchestrated by the MCC, Love Jones performs and students enjoy the good time and good company.

Is there really diversity on the SCU campus? Many would argue that there is not enough diversity and that Santa Clara attracts a common group of people that have similar backgrounds and ethnicities. This is an issue that many struggle with, but when we delve into it, we will see that diversity on this campus is much more apparent than we may realize.

Thirty-two percent of SCU students are of color and nine clubs are represented by the MultiCultural Center (MCC). These clubs include the Arab Cultural Society, Asian Pacific Student Union, Barkada, Chinese Student Association, Igwebuike, Intandesh, Ka Mana 'o O Hawaii, Latino Student Union, and the Vietnamese Student Association. Each individual club hosts a cultural event each year; and the MultiCultural Center hosts a major event every year called "Global Villiage," an outdoor festival, which is open to all. The MCC collaborates with other clubs to provide campus events that appeal to all students.

Further, diversity goes beyond biological differences. It goes into other areas that we may be blind to at first. As a renowned collegiate institution, Santa Clara attracts students from all over the world. Our campus is flooded with students from extremely diverse upbring-

Santa Clara also educates students m various financial situations. Over % of enrolled students rely on finan- l aid and/or University scholarships.

Santa Clara acknowledges every person's differences and embraces their fresh opinions and thoughts inside and outside the classroom. No matter how we look at it, the students at SCU are diverse and the various backgrounds and experiences contribute to a unique learning environment.

Students Bring Their Experiences Abroad

Take Me There.

Taking time away from the typical life as a student at Santa Clara, many choose to adventure overseas to enhance their college experience. Students who chose to study abroad are positively affected by the experience of learning in and about a foreign country. Many report of gaining a profound worldly knowledge, and a newfound respect for their life and the opportunities given to them. Christina Fialho was invloved in the Summer Program at the University of Durham. She was able to reflect upon her travels through Northern Europe in a Travel Writing course:

Reverently, I walk down to the green grass plane that rests underneath these remarkable edifices. The smell of wet dew permeates the air. I approach the small, mystical building first. It was used by the abbey's patrons, nobility, and wool merchants. Sitting upon a ledge of an arched window, I feel at home in this Cistercian abbey as if God is cradling me in his loving arms. Hearing the faint trickling of a creek, I turn behind me. To my left, a blue-bellied bird alightsupon a greying stone bridge that curves over the narrow stream. I watch as if I have never seen water flow over small rocks and through growing weeds. But seemingly insignificant moments like these are much more spiritual here.

The Study Abroad program offered through the University is an amazing way to travel across the world without falling behind on your education. Rather, it advances it in unexpected and irreplaceable ways.

Many students decide to go abroad during their Junior Year. The University offers several programs overseas that are direct exchange with Santa Clara, and also accepts credit from numerous programs in cities across the world. For students looking to expand their education by studying abroad, the opportunities are endless.

interactions between scpd and scu students at a low.

For many students, college is a time for exploration and meeting new people. It is a time to become socially immersed in your surroundings and leave it behind having no regrets. For these reasons it is safe to say that parties are a highly prominent component of college culture.

Students at Santa Clara are no different, and over the course of the academic year will attend parties of every size theme and intensity.

Anytime you combine massive amounts of people with loud music and alcohol, minor problems are bound to occur. Due to the fact that the University lies right within the heart of the Santa Clara community, police enforcement is a necessity. Given the circumstances, student/police relations are remarkably good. Within the last few years the police department has enforced the First Response Policy, which allows for a warning period before fining or ticketing students for party disruptions..

Despite the few memorable encounters with the police that occurred earlier this Fall, incidents involving the police have been statistically lower the past couple of years. Presently Santa Clara is not notably considered a "party school," and is becoming increasingly more academically driven. A Santa Clara alumni reported that "Santa Clara is not nearly the party school it was when I attended. The students seem driven and focused." As time goes by college will change in many ways, but in the past, present, and future there was and always will be parties. Thanks to these social gatherings students will leave this year with many fun, crazy and memorable experiences to add to their overall collegiate journey.

Oktoberfest! Day parties in general were less likely to be broken up by police due to noise complaints.

Did You Know...

- The Santa Clara PD deals directly with approximately 200 students a year. This is only about 4% of the total undergraduate population.
- The police receive an average of 275-300 calls per month from the neighboring community and Santa Clara students combined.
- Recent demographics show that student involvement with the police spikes at the beginning and end of each quarter.

Game Time. Small social gatherings are typical of Santa Clara, and rarely require police involvement.

Party Patrol. A local Santa Clara officer patrols the streets on a Saturday night.

Break It Up! Noise complaints are the most common reason for cops being called on weekend nights.

Tag Team. Most cops show up at parties in pairs, and simply ask students to clear the premises.

MINISTRY

Having Faith is Key

Let us begin in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit… It's beginning we all know quite well after attending mass. The subject of each mass holds various unique meanings to every individual. Some view mass as a place where they can share their faith with the community; others look at mass as a spiritual journey to embark upon while exploring their own personal faith. Santa Clara University takes pride in holding these traditional faith gatherings mainly because of the impact they have on students. Whatever one's attitude towards mass may be, the community welcomes everyone to try it out.

Spiritually, mass can be a rewarding experience for a number of reasons. The mission where our masses are held, named after St. Clare of Assisi, is a place for the community to engage in not only Catholic religious services, but also services of other religions and faiths. Students are given a chance to explore, examine, and strengthen their religious character. Mass allows students to develop the "whole person" and in doing so become a person for others.

Students are called to mass for different reasons, Senior Paige Chant feels that "one of the biggest strengths of the student masses are that they are student masses - students lecture, students serve as Eucharistic ministers, students comprise the choir. Additionally, I think the Jesuits attract a good number of students who perhaps otherwise wouldn't find mass such a meaningful experience. A lot of the Jesuits give amazing homilies that speak directly to us as students that meet us where we are right now in our lives."

Left: Opening our hearts. Rev. Michael McCarthy S.J. welcomes students and the entire community to the 10pm Sunday mass.

Upper Left: Joined in spirit. Together students and community join hands, spirit, and faith as they recite the Our Father. This prayer is usually said before the sacrament of Communion in Catholic masses, and is followed by an offering of peace. These offerings usually take the form of a handshake or hug.

Lower Left: The Word of the Lord. Senior Laura Billingsley reads a passage from the Bible. One of the best aspects of mass here is the student involvement. Students are able to follow their vocation and become part of the mass.

Below: Light Showers. Rev. Michael McCarthy S.J. lightly showers students with holy water. The water is symbolic for a rebirth that occurs with the sacrament of Baptism.

Masses at SCU certainly speak to the students and the whole community in various ways. However, some feel that mass here is a bit too informal in comparison to masses elsewhere. Yet in the spirit of open-mindedness, we are called to embrace diversity where ever it may grow. Many individuals rejoice in the abstract aspect of these student-customized ceremonies. Attending mass can be a wonderful way to experience spiritual growth.

We as a community should look at mass as a tool that allows for an exploration of faith. Senior Tessa Carter points out that with mass, like anything else new, "Just go to give it a chance! I can't think of a student I've talked to who hasn't gotten something out of mass. If you don't like the 10pm, try the 7pm or 10am...they all offer something a little different." So in the spirit of being different, give mass a shot. You will never know what you're capable of learning until the heart and mind are opened to something new.

today people are concerned with their image. Whether influeneed by emaciated blonde haired Barbie dolls as children, or bombarded by the latest body build workouts as adults, image impacts society. Last spring a self-report study was done on 812 undergraduate Santa Clara students to get an approximation of how students view their image. The self-report examination was very straightforward and asked the students direct questions. The students taking the exam, if suffering from an eating disorder, would first have to identify with having a disorder. Unfortunately most people who do in fact have an eating disorder simply do not identify. The test showed that 2% or about 17 students identified with having an eating disorder. These numbers are consistent with universities across the nation. These numbers aren't large, but there is still a problem. Although eating disorders are usually classified as either anorexia or bulimia, it is important to keep in mind that there are other destructive forms of eating behavior. These behaviors can range from starvation to overeating to obsessive exercising. It is important to know yourself and know what a healthy balance is for you. Two students-a freshman and a senior- were asked the question what does body image mean to you? To freshman Narsai Tailo, "body image doesn't mean much, I don't really care all that much what people think...I workout and run for sports not to impress people." Senior Elizabeth Budd feels that, "you have to own your body image. Inner strength and confidence are the two strongest positive factors in my mind." Body image is different for everyone and it is important to know and recognize good nutritional habits for yourself. Eating disorders can develop as attempts to cope with stress, and we all can attest that college can be a very stressful time. Eating disorders also develop in times of transition, such as beginning college, graduating from college, or getting married. This is not to say that everyone is destined to develop an eating disorder, but rather to show that it is important to deal with these difficult times appropriately.

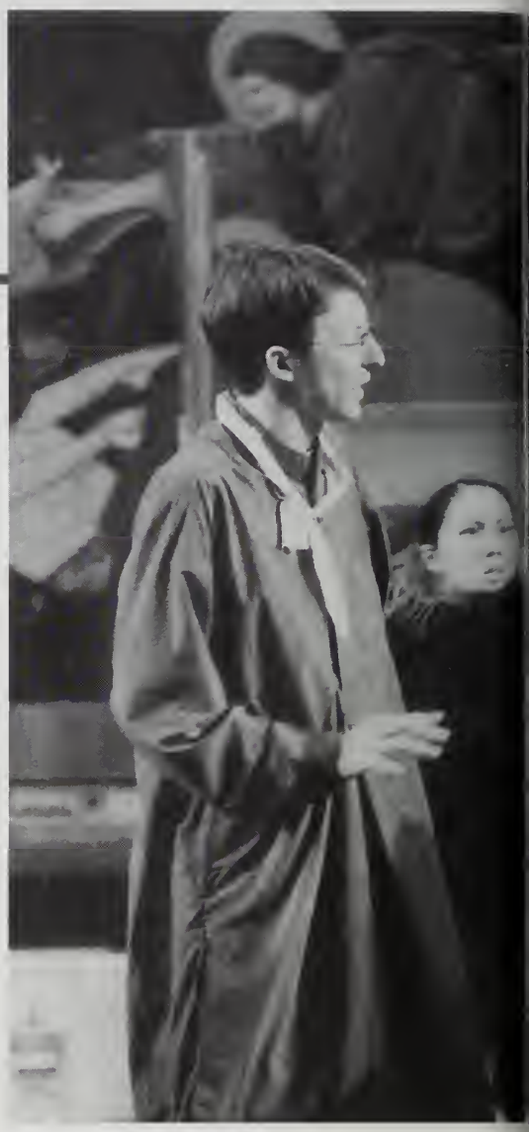
Unfortunately obsessive body image behavior has started to increase in men. The numbers for eating disorders in men has grown nationally. Today 10% of diagnosed eating disorders develop in men. These numbers are increasing due to more emphasis on body image for men. Men today are bombarded with body build workouts, supplements, shakes, and getting that 6 pack. Today the latest diet people have been buying into has been the low-carb, no bread on my hamburger please, protein laden method of losing weight. Is this necessarily healthy? You can be the judge of that. However Dr. Zeamba of the Wellness Center has her own diet plan. Zeamba says, "It is important to consider the whole mind and body when considering health and wellness, sleep, good nutrition, and social balance. As far as nutrition, don't ascribe to fad diets. Proper nutrition and exercise are the keys!" Santa Clara University offers a lot of assistance for students struggling with their body image. The Wellness Center has an abundance of information on the topic. If you think you are struggling with your image or you know of someone who is it would be vital to get help. Santa Clara also has Emergency Medical Technicians on staff waiting to assist students. It is ultimately your image and choice. If you see the signs explore the help!

dance, music, theater

on stage at Mayer



The Center of Performing Arts here at Santa Clara University believes that essential to the cultivation of the body, mind, and spirit are the studies of dance, music, and theatre. Each year the Center of Performing arts puts together an exciting season full of dance, music, and theatre events that show off the amazing talents of the SCU community. In addition to entertaining the audience, the shows push the community to continue to think outside of the box by challenging them with concepts that exist in the plays or music pieces it presents. This year the Center opened its theater season with David Edgar's Pentecost. With practices six days a week for two and a half hours each day, the cast definetly spent a lot of time piecing together this play that covers so much in just a few hours. Set in an abandoned Eastern European Church where an ancient painting has been discovered, the characthers debate heavily on the topics of art, humanity, religion, and capitalism. The complexity of Pentecost challenges, on all levels, the audience to think of society's take on all that is religious and capitalistic. With King Lear being performed in the spring, the Center of Performing Arts has picked excellent plays for this year's theater season at SCU.

Above: Central to Pentecost is the historic painting found on an abandoned church's wall. The refugees and hostages gather around the priest, played by Joseph O'Malley, as he explains the importance of the artwork.
Right: An ongoing debate throughout Pentecost is the authenticity of the painting as well as the differences that people of different backgrounds have. Josh Sabine, Joseph O'Malley, James Drisco, and Claire Larson discuss their ideas of what the appropriate plans are for the painting.

"The world needs artists who are not afraid to confront the deep questions - the role of art, politics, war, science, technology, and religion in a world growing ever smaller."

-Aldo Billingslea, Director

Left: The church being taken over by refugees who have decided to hold those inside hostage sets the stage for many intense and dramatic moments. A suspenseful moment towards the end of the play, the refugees played by Kathryn Lum, Jason Sarnol, Mary Kalst-Lakara, and Carolina Morales, realizing that they are trapped inside the church, decide to burn the painting while the priest, played by Joseph O'Malley, tries to persuade them to spare the painting.

AS

Associated Students of Santa Clara University

Associated Students of SCU (ASSCU) started out this year on fire, literally! Welcoming students got to know "s'more about AS" at kickoff: AS members organized a bonfire complete with s'mores and plenty of AS info. The momentum kept going through freshmen elections with an unprecedented amount of candidates running for freshmen class office and senate.

Making the student voice heard on a variety of issues ranging from alcohol sanctions in residence halls to the relationship of students with the administration, AS has represented the student body through a variety of venues. Class officers worked to unite each class through study breaks, pizza nights, and Senior Ball.

Improving student life is one of the main goals of the organization. SafeCar Services, a nationwide Safe Ride program, was a new service brought to the student body this year. The class justices continued serving the students through the free legal advice program. The senate, judicial branch, and class officers all unite to form a cohesive group of diverse students.

Santa Clara Review

Left: A dedicated staff. The Review staff meets regularly on Wednesdays to implement new ideas, review the latest submissions, and discuss the process of the valued literary magazine.

It was an exciting year for the Santa Clara Review. The first issue was fresh in many ways. The magazine's design and artwork were ye-catching and many of the pieces revealed a arker tone, creating a degree of coherence that isn't sually present in the literary magazine.

The staff set many goals at the beginning f the school year. For one, they wanted to make ie Review a valuable resource for student writers. he section editors met with individual students workshop their pieces. Though thankful for the lenitude of off-campus submissions, the staff was mostly excited to publish their own students.

The Review staff also revitalized their practicum discussion course by using a new online submission database to give students more exposure to the quality and range of literature.

Each staff member on staff contributed amazing and creative ideas to the Review's direction this year. Proudly, the staff put their ideas into play. Their hope is to continue helping students publish, and also provide an avenue for everyone to enjoy literature.

MCC

MultiCultural Center

The Multicultural Center is more than a bunch of students who hang out together. Commonly referred to as the "MCC," the center brings together students and community members interested in cultural awareness and education. People involved in the MCC have numbers commitments to educate, program, represent, and unite.

The MCC is entirely student run - something that makes this already rare organizations ever more unique. To date, there are only a couple of student-run cultural centers among American Universities. The MCC brings educations enrichment through events like MCC Week, and also celebrates diversity with festivities like Global Village.

Of course, members of the MCC have a lot of fun too. With nine resident clubs to choose from, how can one not make friends? From early in the morning to late at night, at least a couple of MCC regulars can be found hanging out in Shapell Lounge.

"Coming Soon: MCC Week!" The Executive Board of MCC and the Presidents of the nine resident cultural clubs meet to discuss current issues, and plan the upcoming well-known MCC Week.

A weekend away. The Executive Board takes the weekend off from other activities to attend an MCC retreat. Members had the opportunity to get to know each other better and create exciting plans for the new school year.

SCCAP

Santa Clara Community Action Program

The Santa Clara Community Action Program (SCCAP) has been one of the largest organizations since it began in the 1960's. The student-run organization works to break down boundaries in social, cultural, and economic areas. Through civic engagement, the organization socially serves and educates those who may be less fortunate in diverse communities both on and off campus. Members are encouraged to explore the various social systems and create solutions to correct underlying problems and provide aid when needed. Members work together to create goals that guide them to fulfill this purpose."

The Redwood

Yearbook Staff

It's been a long time coming for Santa Clara's century old yearbook. Beginning as a literary publication, The Redwood has transformed over the last hundred-plus years into a record of memories for SCU students. Long hours and stressful deadlines best describe the life of a yearbook staff member, but the rewards of producing a quality product outweigh the difficulties of being part of this organization.

This year's staff is working even harder than before on transforming the book into a more serious publication. Topics covered included gay rights and the war in Iraq, among others. In the midst of printing, Editor-in-Chief Krista McNamara feels confident about the changes, stating, "It will be interesting to see how people react to this book considering that books in the past have been more fun and friendly. We've put a lot of time into it and are really hoping for a good response from students and faculty."

Activities Programming Board

From comedians, band nights, and dates with athletes to holiday dances, Bronco Bash, and trips to San Francisco, APB makes life interesting for Santa Clara Students. A popular and well-known organization, APB coordinates events, activities, and opportunities for students to get involved in on and off campus by enhancing school pride and spirit. Whether bringing in big names or local talents, you can be sure that APB is working hardest at entertaining SCU students and helping them have a memorable for years.

APB put on many events this year: Win a Date with an Athlete, Wheel of Fortune, Monster's Bash, Last Comic Standing, Bronco Bash, college football games, bowling nights, and band nights. As APB continues to bring exciting and new events to students, we can be sure that their presence on campus will always be welcomed.

What's located in the basement of Swig Residence Hall besides the laundry room? The campus radio station, of course! Towering over Santa Clara, the antennas protruding from the top of Swig provide a 30-mile broadcasting radius for a truly unique radio station. KSCU, dubbed "The Underground Sound," is a 50-watt non-commercial radio station operated by Santa Clara University students. KSCU's DJs play only independent music, varying from indie rock, punk, ska, jazz, blues, reggae, and others. KSCU, though the name has changed, has been a radio station for over 50 years. KSCU not only plays music over the radio waves, but also brings bands to play intimate concerts for students in The Bronco and The Brass Rail. "The Underground Sound" strives to play good music unrecognized by mainstream radio, which makes the station appreciated even more by students and many loyal listeners.

3 Reasons for RLC's

"Being part of the RLC's has been a great experience. Since I am in Delphi (the Arts and Communications RLC) we've been able to participate in Art shows, Lounge Acts, Immersion trips and museum excursions. The RLC's provide us with the opportunity to get to know each other through exciting activities."

Delphi RLC

"Students usually love the classes that are linked to the RLC's because they get to know people on a different level. They see each other in class, in the halls, at the weekly socials or DISCOVER groups, and can create communities and relationships that are long-lasting and meaningful."

-Amanda Seguin, RD
Communitas & Xavier RLC's

"I really think that the RLCs are working. At least in my own residence hall, I notice that the Delphi students have developed a corporate identity and spirit, and are benefitting from the process in terms of spirit, studies and lifestyle."

Living on campus can be an abrupt change for most first year students. Adapting to a new environment and new people can be very challenging. The relatively new Residential Learning Communities, commonly referred to as RLCs, ease this transition as they unite students with common interests by placing students in the same classes and in the same residence halls. According to Prof. Philip Kesten, Director of RLCs, "There are two overarching goals of the RLC program. First is to form closer, more supportive communities among students. The second is to find ways to help integrate students' academic, social, and residential environments." RLCs accomplish this by housing RLC members in common residence halls, and offering special classes to members of specific RLCs. "By taking classes with other students in their living group during the fall of their first year, freshmen are more quickly brought into the community of the RLC." Long-lasting relationships are immediately established and the coursework, which is centered on the theme of the community, allows students to intertwine their academic and social lives.

Included in the nine campus-wide RLCs are the following: ALPHA, which is created for students interested in Art History, Literature, Philosophy, and History; Communitas is for students to "explore the themes of individualism, community, and citizenship"; Cypress students strive to increase global and local environmental awareness; members of da Vinci are interested in the sciences; Delphi is associated with the arts and media; Loyola was created for those who are interested in integrating faith and justice with their formal education;

Modern Perspectives, which challenges students with questions of the 21st century; Unity, which is the RLC that focuses on diversity and civic engagement; and Xavier, which strives to create a just world and advocates "educating the whole person." All the RLCs are open to students of all majors and they offer classes that relate to these common interests.

RLCs offer events outside of the classroom as well. Field trips, special shows, films, and other social events with the faculty members of the RLC that incorporate the common interests are regular occurrences.

So do the RLCs really achieve these goals? While there are still students that may disagree to RLCs' effectiveness, there are many—faculty members as well as students—who show support for the program. Extensive surveys show that over the years, enthusiasm for RLCs has grown and many support the integrated academic and social program.

RLCs provide students with the opportunity to create meaningful relationships with their classmates as well as faculty in and outside the classroom. Prof. Philip Keston notes that "students get a tangible benefit from getting to know their faculty outside the classroom. Students get to see us as people as well as instructors—it's great for them and great for us!"

Academics

A Business Breakthrough

Exciting new endeavors are on the horizon for the Leavey School of Business. Just this year students have been able to become members of Santa Clara's first international business Fraternity, Alpha Kappa Psi. The club has gained popularity amongst the undergraduate students and already has an impressive membership count. Unlike the common characteristics of a fraternity, Alpha Kappa Psi is open to both male and female students. The fraternity started out this academic year in the colony status and as of January 2005, has been installed as a chapter. The main goals of the fraternity are to promote brotherhood, guide you on a path to lifelong learning, and implement ethical standards in everyday actions while improving your community and school. Vice President Eduardo Lerma commented that "As founding fathers for Alpha Kappa Psi, it is our duty to become professional citizens within our community here at Santa Clara." Molding Alpha Kappa Psi around the three fundamental values that Santa Clara promotes, Conscious, Compassion, and Community will allow both the members of AKPsi as well as the general community of Santa Clara to benefit from the installment of the new chapter. The President of the new fraternity is Richard Gobea.

The addition of Alpha Kappa Psi has been an exciting breakthrough for the school of business and proves that the school will continue to advance as new opportunities surface with each new year. The Leavey School of Business continues to gain more and more public recognition for the success of its programs.

What could you build with a few popsickle sticks and a bottle of glue? A shack, a square raft, a stick man? Well the engineers at Santa Clara University could probably wield a dune buggy out of these materials if you gave them a few hours. With upper division math courses, complicated labs, mountains of homework, intricate sketches, and possible extra years of college, engineers at Santa Clara University posses the work ethic needed to be successful. Many students graduating from Santa Clara's Engineering school will go on to be engineers, managers, entrepreneurs, presidents, and even executive vice presidents of Silicon Valley technology giants like Intel or Hewlett-Packard.

The students take advantage of studying in the heart of Silicon Valley through internships, co-ops, employment, research opportunities, and valuable alumni networking. Along with these experiences, students learn effective teamwork as they work closely with other engineering students to develop junior and senior design projects. These design teams are made up of approximately five students and go on to compete with other schools at the regional, and possibly national, level. With hard work, hands-on experiences, and passion, students of Santa Clara's Engineering school can do anything they set their minds to, even build a dune buggy out of popsickle sticks.

Taking Control
The Broncos searched the sky for the soccer ball that sailed into the air. They played a tough game against San Diego at the West Coast Conference Match. The final score was a tough loss 2-1.

A Moment of Victory
The Broncos beat UC Berkeley. These teammates grouped together out on the field with smiles and sheer joy after their win 2-1.

Teaming Up, Staying Strong

Santa Clara's women's soccer team, the 2001 National Champions and 2002 College Cup finalists, have been working hard this year in the NCAA Women's Soccer Championship. These Broncos, playing with determination and a love for soccer, were victorious over Stanford, University of North Carolina, and UC Berkeley. The Bronco's win over the Stanford Cardinal was made possible by an assist, from senior Megan Kakadelas, to sophomore Tina Estrada. Estrada ended up scoring the winning goal for her team during overtime. After Santa Clara's win over Stanford, senior Leslie Osborne felt her team was ready to challenge University of North Carolina. "The entire team wanted to go through Carolina again." She said, "We're going to give them the best game we can give them but we're ready." Santa Clara was once again victorious. The team played a tough game against University of North Carolina. Senior forward Megan Kakadelas, scored the winning goal with the help of her teammate, Estrada. Estrada took control of the ball and delivered Kakadelas the pass; which resulted in a win. Kakadelas remembers her winning goal, "In the back of my mind, I thought `don't miss this.' She (UNC goalkeeper Aly Winget) gave me some room on the near post side and I saw that, so I just put it in." Along with the many strong victories Santa Clara has experienced, the West Coast Conference recognized a few of the teams most outstanding players.

Leslie Osborne, senior midfielder, was recently honored as Defensive Player of the Year by the WCC for her hard work in assisting her team's six consecutive wins to complete their regular season. Head coach Jerry Smith commented on Osborne's award, "We're especially happy for Leslie...becoming the first player in WCC history to win both the Player of the Year award, which she won last year, and now the Defensive Player of the Year. For her to pick up the slack after our two center backs went down earlier this year, just shows the well-rounded and complete team player that she is." Leslie Osborne, Megan Kakadelas, Marian Dalmy, and Julie Ryder were all named to the All-WCC first team. Estrada was named to the second team, and honorable mentions were given to Jordan Angeli, Bree Horvath, and Tiffany Roberts. These women have worked hard, played hard, and showed us all that practice really does make perfect.

Broncos Beat the Bears
Another sweet victory for the Broncos, this win against UC Berkeley put Santa Clara ahead in their first NCAA game.

Once again, SCU Mens soccer Team has given their school something to be proud of after finishing the 2004 season, winning fifteen of their twenty one games played. The Broncos held the upper hand in many of their conference matches, although competition this year was tight forcing the men have to work for each and every win. With many close matches, spectators were always assured to enjoy a good game of soccer with remarkable athletic performances.

This year eight Bronco men received recognition by the West Coast Conference for their exceptional athleticism. Senior and Co-captain Will Weatherly and teammate Medhi Ballouchy were each named to the All-WCC First Team. Senior Jason Pan was named to the All-WCC second team, while Freshmen Peter Lowry, Sophomores Keith DeVey and Hector Guzman and Junior Ryan Purtell each received WCC Honorable Mention. Lowry and Matthew Hatzke were named to the All-Freshmen Team. The season ended with a 2-1 defeat to California in the first round of the NCAA Championship. Head Coach Cameron Rast comments, "I see this season as a great period of growth for our team. We got off to such a great start. Then we ran into some teams in our conference, where we had to figure ourselves out. I think we solved a lot of problems and gained a lot of maturity. "

The future looks bright for Santa Clara Volleyball as the young and talented team finished the 2004-2005 season in the Top 25. The women were initially ranked 19th in the country and soared as high as 12th, combining their tight-knit returnees and promising freshman class to create a very cohesive team. With no real senior leaders the team felt closer and could mesh on the same level. Red shirt junior Jac Heler explained, "Unlike a lot of teams who enforce 'seniority rights,' we made it a point not to belittle the freshman. As a result our team is like a family...and many of the girls are my best friends." From eating pre-game meals at beach volleyball legend Mike Dodd's restaurant, to getting a kick out of their teammates getting beamed in the head by balls at practice, the team truly was a family.

The lack of official captains was not an issue, as many girls stepped up and became leaders on the court. Playing with passion, unselfishness, and hard work the team accomplished many feats including upsetting Cal in three straight games at home, and coming back from two games down to beat Peperdine on their home court. Although very young, the team proved its maturity as they overcame an injury-plagued season, including the loss of their starting middle Annalisa Muratore to a knee injury.

With the return of all but one player (T. Muratore), Santa Clara Volleyball is a program on its way to the top. A strong recruiting class combined with the talent and chemistry of the young team means that things can only get better for next season.

teams winning the Bronco Invitational. Both teams each had eight runners place in the top 15 with Jessica Baldwin-Philippi winning the women's 5,000 meter race. Though many people recognize only the individual's importance in cross country because of the lack of interaction during meets between runners, it is the collaborative effort of the team members that makes the teams be successful at meets. It is the close knit friendships that the runners make with each other that reinforce the group effort needed during meets to push pass the other teams. The teams ended the season with the men placing 3rd and the women placing 4th at the WCC Championships and the NCAA West Regional with the men placing 19th and the women placing 25th.

The men's water polo team started off the season ranked 19th by the College Water Polo Association. The season proved to be hectic for the men with several matches every weekend, many of which involved traveling. The young team, under third-year Head Coach Keith Wilbur, played very well together this year with high hopes of improving themselves further in the upcoming seasons. Stepping up as leaders this year were five returning seniors. These vereteran upperclassmen were players that the new members of the team could look to for advice as they are just beginning their collegiate water polo experience. These include players such as Peter Moore and Kenny Flanagan-De La Hoz, both of whom had great seasons. The men wrapped up their season with the Western Water Polo Championships where they played a great four games, which included a win over University of California at Santa Cruz. They finished posting a 10-23 record.

The women of the SCU Water Polo team return this year after finishing fifth in last year's Western Water Polo Association Championship. Within just a few short weeks of the beginning of this year's season, the women obtained their first ever national ranking in the history of SCU Womens Water Polo. They then went on to sweep a triple header against Sonoma State, Cal State Monterey Bay, and UC Santa Cruz.

With many great players returning this year, including last year's top four scorers, the women definitely have experience on their side. It is with this experience that they hope to finish this season by placing in the top three of the Western Water Polo Assocation Championship. According to Head Coach Keith Wilbur, the strengths of the team this year is their experience, depth, and speed. Being together during practices and games creates bonds which help bring the team closer, therefore making the game all the more fun and enjoyable. This tight knit team comes together before each game to do what they call "Inspiration" A different player each game will bring something, like Gatorade or Powerbars, for each member of the team. In addition to this, the player will also have something motivating to say for each member of the team. This type of team unity on top of their strengths is what makes this year's team so strong.

The men's basketball team, coming off a 12-10 overall record last year, had an outstanding 2004-2005 season. With wins over North Carolina, the 4th best team in the country at the time, Stanford, and conference-leading St. Mary's, Santa Clara was a force to be reckoned with.

Head Coach Dick Davey has been at the helm of the men's team for 13 seasons now. In his first 12 seasons, Davey led the Broncos to a 202-148 record, setting him apart from the rest as the winningest active coach in the West Coast Conference. During that time, Santa Clara teams have compiled a 100-68 record in WCC competition. And Davey has bragging rights: Three NCAA Tournament appearances; three West Coast Conference regular season championships; one WCC Tournament title; four wins over Top 25 teams; and three conference coach of the year awards. To top it all off, he is a member of the prestigious board of directors for the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Needless to say, when you are beating up on teams like the Stanford Cardinal and the North Carolina Tar Heels, you tend to keep your job.

Above: Fighting for position. Junior Tristan Parham jostles for position against Gonzaga's center. Parham has been vital to Santa Clara's success this past year. He provides a dominant presence in the post, and his 6-foot-8 frame can scare off anyone wanting to drive the ball into the lane.

It was a breakthrough year for the Santa Clara women's basketball team. And with almost the entire team returning for the 2005-2006 season, the West Coast Conference will have its eye on Santa Clara for some time.

With only five returning players from the year before, the young team has put up veteran numbers. Head coach Michelle Bento-Jackson has molded the squad into three-point shooting assassins, leading the NCAA with nine per game. One of the key elements to the SCU women's arsenal is medical red shirt junior guard Kayla Huss. Huss is described by her coach as an "unbelievable" outside shooter. Of course, as with any great team, everyone on the team contributes to its victories.

While the women's team suffered a loss in their opener against Gonzaga, they battled their way back into second place during the first half of their WCC conference games.

Bento-Jackson, in her third season at the head of the SCU women's basketball program, is setting the young women's team up for years of continued success. With everyone returning next year, the girls will be stronger than ever.

The softball team stands on the brink of a very important season, a season that will say a lot about the program. As defending Pacific Coast Softball Conference champions, the Broncos look to hold their title as conference champions and advance to Regionals in the NCAA tournament for the first time in history. Starting the season ranked 67th in the nation, the team has worked hard in the preseason to accomplish their goals. Head coach and former player Jaime Forman-Lau scheduled a tough pre-season for the girls, playing teams ranked in the top 25 to 50. Such experiences have given the girls a lot of confidence going into conference play. The team started the season on a good foot, beating long-standing rival San Jose State 4-2 and 8-3. Other games that the girls look forward to are Saint Mary's, Sacramento State, and LMU.

Under the leadership of a young coach, the equally-young team gels well together. Junior Jessica Clee comments, "Although we are a young team, we posses a lot of chemistry that we will use to take us to the next level. We need a leader to step up and encourage us to stay mentally tough, especially through close games." It is this mental toughness that will advance Santa Clara to the NCAA tournament and help them overcome setbacks such as losing their starting center-fielder to an injury.

The women hope for more support from students and an on-campus field to encourage this fan support. That is why this season is so crucial for the future of Santa Clara softball. They have a better chance than ever to advance to the tournament, gaining the team respect and recognition that they highly deserve and will get in due time.

Something would be missing if an afternoon stroll around the parameter of Buckshaw stadium wasn't accompanied by the familiar clinking sound of aluminum bats or the inning play-by-play resounding from the stadium speakers. At Santa Clara it's safe to say that life would not be the same without the excitement and energy that the baseball season brings to campuslife. This year the Broncos welcomed 11 freshmen, two four-year transfers and a junior college transfer to join the already sound and skillful returnees to create a squad full of determination and talent. Many of the opening games set the tone for the season, demanding the men to set goals and realize the potential that lay within them. Senior transfer Adam Sanabria remarked, "We were matched up against some great competition from game one. We were able to learn quickly what we needed to do to break our opponents It was probably the best way to start things off."

One of the major milestones of the 2005 season was the retirement of the long standing home field, Buck Shaw Stadium, and the opening of the new Stephen Schott Stadium. The Buck Shaw stadium, which has been home to the Bronco's since 1962 will continue to hold the memories of the past, but overall, the team as well as head coach Mike O'Brien, were pleased with the transition. Now that the field is no longer in the center of campus, fans will have to make more of an effort to satisfy their spring-time desires for peanuts and cracker jacks, but with the new stadium the short walk is well worth the time.

Boston, MA: Head of the Charles Regatta. Santa Clara men's crew walk the streets of downtown Boston and spot the rowers of the Harvard eight, who subsequently will be competing in the championship eight race in the coming days. The Harvard men tower over them and sport their blazers passed down from hundreds of years of tradition and excellence. The Santa Clara men jokingly dismiss the Harvard crew by saying with great courage, "Well I guess we'll see you in the Champ Eight on Sunday." The hulk-like Harvard men stare in disbelief as the men walk away, dawning no blazers, or comparable size, competing at the Charles for the first time in Santa Clara's history.

Although the men's crew team is far from competing in the finals at the Head of the Charles, they have made great strides on the West Coast, and the best is yet to come. Training rigorously on land and water twice a day, six times a week, the men look to win the WCC championship and compete for a podium finish at WIRA's. The men are also returning to Newport for the first time in five years for the Newport Invitational.

Under Head Coach Tony Barcia, his second year as the Varsity men's coach, the crew hopes to translate their hard work into success. Senior Dan Jordan comments, "Coach Barcia is really driven to make us a fast crew and is willing to do everything he can to help, including getting us the best equipment possible and pushing us past our limits." Because the men push themselves, rowing before dawn every morning, a major obstacle that every crew must overcome is a significant number of rowers quitting each year. Captain Tony Johnson explains, "We had several big guys quit after Christmas break. Rowers quitting is always something we have to deal with and is something we'll overcome again this year." Pushing through agony with unity, conquering adversity with passion, forging friendships for life, Santa Clara Crew will continue to grow stronger on the West Coast.

A day in the life of a Women's rower can, at times, be more than challenging. Devoting countless hours to an excruciating practice regime, and sacrificing Friday nights and Spring Break for four years may not exactly be the epitome of "fun" for the average college student. In fact, just the simple task of waking up before 6 a.m., six days out of the week may be enough to detour any person from the sport before even learning what it is all about. Crew is truly a test of physical and mental strength. Despite the ease of which the sport appears to spectators, the actual art of rowing demands complete concentration and total exertion of the body's capabilities.

So what is it exactly that makes it all worthwhile? The answer lies in a single word: Passion. Its eight rowers moving in perfect synchronization with each other, generating enough power to allow the 300 pound boat to glide gracefully beneath them. Knowing that the many hours spent training and preparing will pay off for them on the water. Trusting that with every stroke they have complete commitment and devotion from their entire team. Challenging them to become stronger, exceed their goals and set new standards with old rivalries. Discovering that the bonds that exist within their own team will sustain and grow into lifelong friendships. It is the passion of rowing that drives the women's team at Santa Clara. Senior, four year rower, Erin Hussey was able to put her passion into words, "Crew pushes you, both physically and mentally to places you never thought you could go. You wake up early, you practice twice a day, and no one even knows what your sport is. But you continue. You continue because of your teammates, you continue for yourself, and you continue for that sweet, incredible feeling you get when you cross the finish line a split second before your opponent, completely exhausted, completely drained, completely victorious."

The Women's Crew program has been growing tremendously. This year the Varsity team of 16 is the biggest it has ever been. Head Coach Stephanie Shepherd has worked hard to create a competitive and well trained team of rowers. The Women's Crew program is expected to see growth and strength while continuing to establish a name for themselves in the West Coast Conference.

Men's Tennis is off to another great start this year. The team played a doubleheader and defeated U.C. Santa Cruz and U.C. Davis with a score of 6-1 against both teams. Senior Ben Hidalgo said "...that was a long day and definitely mentally draining. Practices and conditioning really helped us get through it." The team has yet to play other matches, however their goal for the future is to be seeded in the top three at the WCC. Senior Francisco Zepponi feels the key to achieving their goal would be to "win the matches we know we can win. We can't mess up there, and the ones that are border line we need to just try our best." Everyone on the team really supports each other; they are buddies on and off the tennis courts. The Men's Tennis team is a unique blend of talent and strength, and that aspect, along with hard work, has helped them succeed in the past. The team also has a strong Head Coach George Husack. Ben Hidalgo states, "Our Head Coach is always looking out for our best interest." The team really seems to admire and value Husack. Senior Taylor Bedilion stated, "He (Husack) is a good little ping-pong player."

Women's Tennis

The SCU Women's Tennis Team has set their mark in SCU tennis history. The women are proud to be ranked nationally for the first time ever. The team was ranked 70th and couldn't be more happy to see all their effort and work pay off nationally. The players are very excited about their new Head Coach Damon Coupe as well. Senior Catherine Cochrane stated, "This is an exciting year because of our new head coach. We love him and are excited to have such a great coach!" The team so far has competed and beat Cal Poly and CS Fullerton. Sophomore Kelly Leathers says the most exciting moment for her during the Cal Poly match was "coming back with Janalle in the doubles. We beat a team that was ranked 37th nationally. All of the hard work we did paid off; I can't really describe it. It was just exciting—getting the win for the team." The women, having achieved their first goal of ranking nationally, now hope to place in the NCAA Championships. The team is composed of various talents, who may appear passive, but don't be deceived—these women strive for the best. They are a competitive and hard working team. Senior Janalle Kaloi says, "We are competitive on the inside, and strong as a team. Support from the players on the side-lines is what makes our team unique. They believe in us and encourage us. Their support makes this individual sport more team-like." The women's team has succeeded and made SCU Tennis history. What will happen in future matches for the team is hard to say. However, Senior Catherine Cochrane makes one thing clear "We are a pretty close family, and we get along really well. We go out on the courts as a team and in life as a team. Our goal, of course, is always going to be to win."

With both a fall and spring season, the mens and womens golf team have been working all year on perfecing their stroke. Invitations are held at various golf courses all over northern California and even to other states, which makes traveling a big part of their schedule. Though both teams play at varioius school invitationals, one of the mens most successful finishes was at SCU's very own invitational which was hosted at Silver Creek Valley Country Club. Here the team divided into two quads, White and Red, with the White squad finishing fifth and the Red squad finishing first to win the overall invitational. The women were also successful at opening their fall season by finishing second at the Sacramento State Invitational.

In addition to their work on the green, the women have been active members of the community through the Make-A-Wish Foundation with their Birdies for Wishes Program. In this program the team collects pledges for every birdie a player makes during competition. They are so dedicated to their involvement with Make-A-Wish that they have renamed birdies, wishes, in honor of the young people whose wishes they are helping to make come true. At this year's Meet the Team night, the women presented a check to the Make-A-Wish Foundation of all the pledges they had collected throughout the season. Even while the team was split into two groups, one playing in Hawaii and the remaining in Santa Clara, they women made it a point to celebrate National Make A Difference Day in both states by making donations to local Food Banks. The men and women bring a lot of pride to SCU both on and off the course.

The intensity of a combative sport, together with the skill and precision of a fine art unite in lacrosse. After hours spent practicing on Santa Clara's own Bellomy Field, it's no wonder that the season outlook was good for the men's team. A confident group of guys worked towards improving their 4-9 record from last season, and continued to make a name for themselves within their division.

Games against rivalries, such as CAL and Stanford, played important roles for the men this season, and also were built up to be a few of the guys most anticipated and exciting match ups. The men were trained to deliver come game day. Pre-season energy grew quickly as Spring approached. Junior midfielder William Boyce stated, "This year optimism is key, and the outlook is good for the 2005 season." The team's goal included various improvements on technique and hopes to make the division playoffs.

The team dynamic was also important to the men's success on the field. Working towards a common goal, the men were able to establish bonds through hard work and determination. Many will leave Santa Clara with stories and lifelong friendships that will remain in their memories and their lives due to the experiences they are having now, as part of the lacrosse team here at SCU.

With the prospect of a national championship within their reach last year, the women's lacrosse team had even higher hopes and goals for their 2005 season. The team as a whole was much tighter and more skillful than SCU has seen in past years. Many new freshmen joined the team, creating a strong line of support for the large number of seniors the team will be losing next year. The girls showed domination early on with wins over University of Pacific and UCLA, proving that no opponent was going to have it easy when competing with them. Throughout the season the girls had tunnel vision, with hope for an invitation to Nationals inspiring them to maintain their focus.

Head coach Brendan O'Brien spent hours of practice preparing the girls for obstacles which they would have to overcome, and the hard work paid off. The team was led by senior captions Jenni Rushin, Lauren Follett, and Kendall Reedy. Early on in the season the girls were already enthusiastic and energized for what the season would bring to them. Senior captain Jenni Rushin commented, "We're really going to get off the bus this year, and go all the way!" It's obvious that the respect and friendships between the team is present both on and off the field. "We have a lot of fun, at the end of the day that's what's most important. We wouldn't be here if we didn't love the game," stated sophomore Raffinee Eller.

The success of the women's team has drawn the attention and devotion of a large student fan base, making the games a social commodity on campus. The team has set high standards after this season, and is expected to remain at the top of the rankings in future years.

The men's rugby team is undefeated; that is, they have never lost a boat race. And no, a boat race does not take place on the water. A boat race is a tradition that occurs after rugby matches when the teams line up facing each other, one on one. The first pair chug a cup of beer, and when they are through, they place the empty cup on their head and the next man in their line chugs, and so on, until the last player is through. With traditions such as these and ample time spent together on and off the field, Santa Clara Men's Rugby is a club sport providing its members with an experience of a lifetime. Senior captain Greg Mohrman testifies, "Rugby has given me the chance to meet so many loyal, genuine, and generally great friends and brothers I'll remember forever."

As Division II members of the Northern California Rugby Union, Santa Clara faces rivals such as Santa Cruz, Humboldt, and Santa Rosa. Starting their season after Thanksgiving break the men have overcome many obstacles including losing eight of their starters to injuries, something not too uncommon in rugby. As senior flanker/lock Andrew Whiteman says, "The injuries are part of the fun!" Because of this loss of experienced players, the team had to take on many young and inexperienced men that had to learn the sport quickly. Four-year veteran and senior Kevin Baer explains, "One of the good things about this season is the good, young players that showed a lot of heart and potential. SCUTS will have a bright future." And indeed they will have a bright future as they build on their youth and continue to foster great memories, or maybe not, because as team motto says, "Little is known about the rugby after party, but the fun goes on forever."

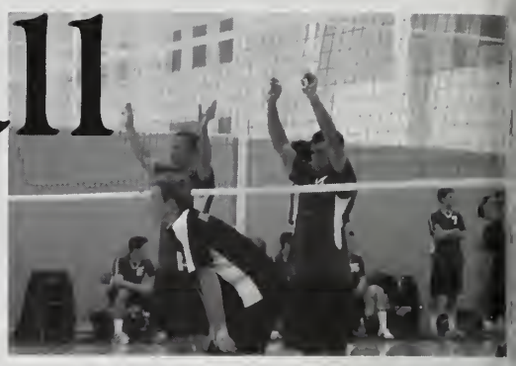
e: Lending a hand. Jumper Meg Balicki gets hoisted up to catch the footie in a line-out. Rugby nly requires brut strength, but teamwork also.

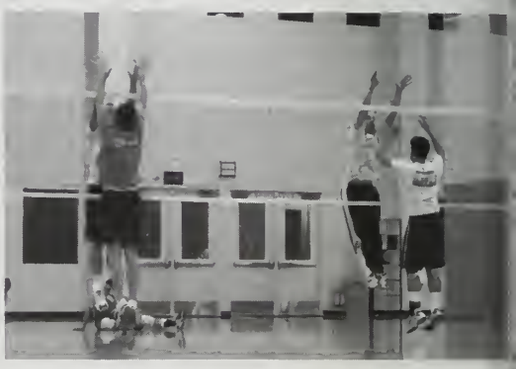
Blood, sweat, exhaustion, pain. What is it about this brutal sport that the women of Santa Clara's rugby team love so much? People don't commonly picture girls mauling opponents, diving for balls, adorning jerseys layered with blood and mud, and wearing smiles on their faces all the while. Senior captain Katie Toliao explains, "The girls who play are so unique because the sport is so demanding, but making friendships and forging strong bonds make rugby what it is for us."

Santa Clara Rugby is a Division II member of the Collegiate Rugby Union and competes with many teams on the West Coast, including rivals Monterrey Bay whom they will face at a tournament in Santa Barbara. The girls hope to gain more experience and understanding of the game as the majority of the team is made up of seniors who are playing for their first season ever. Toliao comments, "We have so many seniors this year who help the freshman meet a lot of people. Our team has the perfect mix of age and experience."

Santa Clara Women's Rugby hopes to finish the season with a winning record, and when they do, Head Coach Neil Chatterji has promised to shave his legs. With a fun atmosphere and a drive to win, women's rugby will always be a club sport at Santa Clara that will add great memories to the girls' college experience.

Men's Volleyball





The Men's Volleyball team knows how to serve it up! The men are off to a great start this season. So far they have competed against and defeated: Fresno State, San Francisco State, and UC Davis. They have had four matches and lost only one to Cal Poly. The win against Davis was quite an accomplishment for the team. For Senior Thomas O'Keefe the most exciting moment of the season has been, "Beating Davis! We haven't had a very good history against them, so it was really exciting to gain the win. We did really well and beat them in 3 out of the 5 matches played." The team has been working hard and practicing a lot. By the looks of things it seems that all of their efforts have certainly paid off. The team has accomplished their first goal by ranking under Division 1 in nationals. The men were proud to have placed 3rd out of a total 20 teams for the Far Western Tournament. Senior Scott Almassy stated, "It's our first year as Division 1. Our goal now for this year is to finish in the top 16 of that Division. To achieve our goal ultimately we have to continue practicing. We need to just look at the season as a whole; not just as individual matches." The men have done well this season, and have worked together to accomplish their goals. All of the effort and determination the team has put into the season has carried them a long way. Senior Thomas O'Keefe said, "We would like now to win league or nationals." What an he Cheer team brings spirit and motivation to any athletic event on campus. We've all been there and know that it doesn't take long for the girls rouse a crowd of Rough Riders. However, most of us probably don't recognize how much work and dedication es into the cheers we hear. Senior Michelle Candoo makes the point it cheer is very team oriented. If one person is missing from a rou- e they practiced it won't work. It is very easy to become injured, as stunts they do are extremely complicated. Cheer requires physical ength, endurance, and flexibility. Sophomore Allegra Eslick states, he physical aspect of cheer is difficult because it requires your mind d body." Despite the risks, the team is composed of a unique blend ability. Freshman Darleen Macanan states, "We all have a variety of ent," and her teammate Sophomore Kate Katri adds that "everyone ings different experiences and strengths to the team." Cheer loves to d excitement to any Bronco crowd. Senior Michelle Candoo states, he aspect of cheer that I enjoy most is the adrenaline rush from the owd. You feel like cheering for the team is actually inspiring the ayers." The team feels that crowd spirit is an important aspect to eer. The positive ambiance created by a Bronco crowd really seems motivate the team. Michelle says, "It's really great to see everyone t to support our team, and it creates an awesome atmosphere which akes the players actually play better!"

So, now what are you going to do? If you are a senior you have heard this question more than you'd like. Have you ever wanted to just make up answers...well, since you asked, I am planning on training Bengal tigers in the depths of India. Or...actually, I'm going to backpack through South America in search of the meaning of life and the ever-elusive Patagonia polar- fleece chinchilla.

What are we going to do? I won't ask you...we have the rest of our lives to decide. But before we go, let's look at all the things we've done thus far:

We've discovered the joy of living off campus...

Made our voice heard by voting in an important election...

Frolicked through the Rose Garden and maybe even picked a forbidden rose...

Skipped at least one Friday class...

and Tuesday, and Wednesday, and let's be honest, Thursday too...

Had a little too much to drink more than once, but hey who hasn't?

Swam in the Malley Pool after hours and occasionally the Benson fountain too...

Watched the world around us change...

Confided to professors...

Found the joy of good coffee with better friends...

...and had a hell of a lot of fun together!

2005

Rebecca A. Cheaves

Dear Becky,

Where has the time gone? One day you were our baby and all of a sudden. ..poof! We just can't believe that you are already graduating from college! We are so proud of the young lady you have become and are so pleased to call you our daughter.

You have excelled in both academics and athletics, surpassing even our highest expectations.

Although you have had many obstacles to overcome, you have always met them head-on and become stronger in the process. We know that you can accomplish whatever you set out to do. We love you with all our hearts and hope that you know that this is just the beginning of the amazing adventure that lies ahead of you. We hope that you continue to reach for the stars and that all your dreams (even your wildest ones) come true.

With all our love,
Dale, Mom, Grandpa, & Grandma

Cristina Burciaga Guzmán

Congratulations Cristina!
You have worked hard and made many sacrifices to get to this day and we are all so proud of you. We are proud of the little girl that has brought us so mucl joy and has grown up to be such a beautiful, caring woman. With God's help and your drive and determination, we know that you will accomplish your goals. May your future be full of blessings and much happiness. We will always be there for you.
God Bless you!
We love you mucho!
Mom, Dad, Gaby, Migue, and Chino

Ileana S. Jimenez

Well, it really seems you grew up to be the Wonder Girl in your childhood picture. Words cannot express how proud we are of you "hija." Always keep in mind that the most precious things in life are family, friends, and a good character that allows you to have consideration for others & a sense of humor. Success

To laugh often and much to win the respect of intelligent people and the affection of children;
to earn the appreciation of honest critics and endure
the betrayal of false friends;
to appreciate beauty,
to find the best in others;
to leave the world
a bit better, whether by a healthy child,
a garden patch,
or a redeemed social condition;
to know even one life
has breathed easier
because you have lived.
That is to have succeeded.

Sara Aimee Clements

Before you were born, we asked for two things: that you be happy and healthy. Right from the beginning, we knew we had so much more.

It took both of us working hard every minute to satisfy your curiosity. No naps and very little sleep. It seemed to us as if you were afraid you would miss something if you slept.

You grew into a wonderful child and adult. You were always respectful of your elders and could carry on conversations with the best of them. You also surpassed our wildest expectations in the Beauty and Brains Department!

To sum it all up, we are both very proud of your accomplishments as a Daughter, a Friend, in scholastics, sports, drama and as an overall well-rounded person.

In other words WE LOVE YOU INFINITY PLUS ONE!

Dear Neda,

It has been almost four years since you have left us to go to Santa Clara University. We have missed you every day, but since you have brought so much in our lives, just remembering you is good enough to fill your place. Your heavenly voice is a gift that God has given you and the beautiful songs you sing always echoes in our house and fills the emptiness of you being away at college. You are a master of creating acronyms and slang, you have changed our vocabulary in the house and using them is a great reminder of you and your laughter (Borgboni).

We will always support you in what ever you do and we are proud of what you have accomplished. We love you and keep being you!
